Dear Junqi Huang,

You are invited to participate in:

A research project exploring how interactive narrative games can express memory, connection, and digital remembrance through embodied interaction.

Please read this sheet carefully and be confident that you understand its contents before deciding whether to participate.

Why have you been approached?

You have been approached because you are a potential user of interactive or narrative-based digital experiences, and your feedback can help evaluate how intuitive, immersive, and emotionally effective the prototype is. No specialist knowledge or gaming experience is required.

If I agree to participate, what will I be required to do?

You will be asked to:

1. Play a short demo of the interactive game (5–10 minutes).
2. Provide feedback through a brief questionnaire or short discussion (5–10 minutes).
3. Comment on usability, clarity, and emotional experience related to the project theme.

Participation will take approximately 10–20 minutes in total.

What are the possible risks or disadvantages?

There are no significant risks associated with this study. The game contains themes of memory and symbolic representations of loss, but no graphic or distressing content. You may stop at any time without giving a reason.

What are the benefits associated with participation?

While there is no financial reward, your input is highly valued.

What will happen to the information I provide?

Your feedback will be used only for research and evaluation within this project.

Personal data will be stored on UAL-managed systems only and will not be shared with external organisations.

Your data will be anonymised by July 2025 and deleted on your request or by July 2025 after the project end date.

All responses will be handled in accordance with UAL privacy policies.

What are my rights as a participant?
